Folice Think the Assassin May Have Been Seeking the Mother of Gardner, Who Recently Won a Suit Against the Relatives of Her Deceased Second Husband

The man who tried to get into William R. Gardner's home in Bath Beach on Thursday night and who slashed three of the neighbors who went to Mrs. Gardner's the police, after a hard day's work, have no ne as to his identity.

They have, however, two theories as to what the man was after. According to both theories the intruder is neither a lunatio nor a thief, and he was not trying to find Mrs. William R. Gardner, the young woman whom he scared half out of her

One of these police theories is that the man was looking for his own wife, who oft him to live with a man named Gardner; out not the William R. Gardner of Bath avenue and Bay Ninth street.

The other notion, and the one which the police think is the more reasonable, is that the slasher was looking for William R. Gardner's mother, Mrs. Ann Hamilton, of 218 East Thirty-first street, Manhattan, who recently won a $100,000 law suit agains the relatives of her second husband.

Capt, Leavey of the Bath Beach police station, his two wardmen and Detective Sergeants Mulvey and Price of the Brookyn Headquarters worked on the case all day yesterday. It was so much of a foozle that Inspector McLaughlin went to Bath Beach himself to investigate. But none of he police officials could get at anything really tangible. Nobody at the Gardner ousehold gave them any assistance. They ere convinced that young Mrs. Gardner as telling the truth when she said that had no idea of the intruder's identity

why he should come to her home. the other hand, the detectives thought Mrs. Hamilton might have thrown ome light on the queer case if she had been so inclined. The neighbors agreed with

Frederick Folster, a son-in-law of John McMahon, the neighbor who was dangerously wounded while trying to put the mysterious stranger off the Gardner prem-

"We can't help thinking that, inasmuch as three of the neighbors were seriously burt while trying to protect the Gardners, the family ought to help the police all they can in running down the assailant. Instead of doing that, they persist in saying that they don't know a thing about it." Mrs. Hamilton went so far as to tell the detectives and other inquirers that she had never been engaged in any lawsuit and knew of nobody who had any grudge against

The man who has made all the trouble and who has given to Bath Beach a mystery was in the neighborhood once before. That was about four weeks ago. On that occasion he went first to the house of a neighbor, Mrs. Golding. He told her that he wanted to find Mrs. Ann Gardner Mrs. Golding said that she knew no such person, but told him that there was a Mrs. Nora Gardner living in the corner house. Then the caller described the woman he was looking for as a person about 60 years old, tall, and with gray hair. The descrip-

There was something about the man that made Mrs. Golding suspicious. He did not help matters any by picking up a stone on his way to the Gardners' front door. When Mrs. Golding saw that, she ran round to the back door of Gardner's house and arned Mrs. Gardner not to answer th bell.

After ringing and knocking for ten minutes the man went away. Mrs. Gardner had seen him through the blinds on that first visit and recognized him when he appropriate the second of the second first visit and recognized him when he appeared again on Thursday night. He saw her on the piazza on his first visit, but paid no attention to her. He kept insisting on seeing Mrs. Ann Gardner. That alone satisfied the police that he was not seeking Mrs. Gardner, but the other woman, whom he had described so accurately a month before and with whose first name he was familiar.

The weak spot in this theory is that the fellow evidently did not know that Mr. Gardner's mother had married again and that he second husband was a Hamilton.

This second husband was George Hamilian.

that he second husband was a Hamilton.

This second husband was George Hamilton, a Scotchman and a well-to-do contractor and builder. He was found dead in his bathtub about three years ago at his home, 218 East Thirty-first street. He left no will and the relatives immediately began to fight for his fortune of something over $10000. The widow claimed everything, on the ground that most of the property belonged to her before she married Hamilton.

The first decision was in favor of the heirs in Scotland, but Mrs. Hamilton carried the case to the Court of Appeals, which reversed case to the Court of Appeals, which reversed the decision and gave to her the whole estate. It was just after this decision of estate. It was just after this decision of the Court of Appeals that the mysterious stranger made his first visit to Bath Beach in search of Mrs. Ann Gardner. Mrs. Hamilton went to her son's house at Bath Beach yesterday after the excite-ment of the night before had died out a little.

The neighbors connected the front-porch stabbing incident with the lawsuit and the stranger's knowledge of the older and the stranger's knowledge of the older woman's personal appearance, age and first name. Then they jumped to the conclusion that the visitor was somebody who wanted to satisfy a personal grudge for not getting a part of Hamilton's fertune.

The police questioned Mrs. Hamilton closely. She strengthened their impression that she might know who the man was by her emphatic denial that she had ever soen in a lawsuit and by her frequently. by her emphatic denial that she had ever been in a lawsuit and by her frequently repeated assertion that she didn't know anything about the case George Gardner, who, according to the neighbors, is the favorite grandchild who will receive the bulk of Mrs. Harditon's mency, strent-ously backed up his grandmother in all her denials.

"BOSS" BUTLER FOUND GUILTY. Democratic Leader of St. Louis Gets Three-Year Sentence for Bribery.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Nov. 14 .- Edward Butler, he Democratic boss of St. Louis, on trial here for the attempted bribery of a member of the Board of Health in the garbage contract case, has been convicted, and sentenced to three years in the penitentiary.

The case went to trial Monday. The defence made no attempt to impeach the testimony of the State, other than to show lack of motive for the crime. Every effort was made to secure acquittal on the ground of the age of the defendant and the assistance, has not yet been caught and I fact that nothing had been charged against him previously

The case went to the jury at 6:45 o'clock last night and the verdict was returned at 8:17 o'clock this morning. A verdict of guilty was reached by the jury on the first ballot. The only question was as to the length of the sentence, whether a maximum of five years or a lesser term be imposed. The jury finally compromised on

That the jury believed, with Attorney Folk, that a violator of the laws is neither a Democrat nor a Republican, but simply eriminal, is shown by the verdict rendered, as the jury was composed entirely of Democrats, several county committeemen being on the panel.

Motion for a new trial was promptly overruled by Judge Hockaday. Then the defence gave notice of an appeal to the Supreme Court and Col. Butler gave bond in $10,000, William T. Stockton, William T. Anderson, James T. Stockton and James H. Guitar, all of this city, going on his bond.

The case of bribery in the lighting contract against Col. Butler, which was set for hearing at Fulton, next Monday, Butler having obtained a change of venue from St. Louis, will have to be postponed until after the Supreme Court acts in appeal in the garbage case.

On Tuesday Mrs. Gaylor suffered a chill and slight convulsion. Dr. Hammond on learning this went to see his patient and learning this went to see his patient and found her in extreme agony. At about 9:30 o'clock Wednesday night, after Mrs. Gaylor had experienced a number of these chills and convulsions, Dr. Hammond became convinced that she was suffering from hydrophobia and telephoned to the Pasteur Hospital in this city. Dr. N. G. Keirle, the director, sent his assistant, Dr. Alfred M. Quessy, to diagnose the case. As soon as he saw Mrs. Gaylor he expressed the belief that she was in the throes of the disease. When an effort was made by the patient to swallow water she went into another convulsion, and when she was another convulsion, and when she was fanned she suffered the same result. She

THEIR BODIES IN THE HUDSON.

THE FATE OF, THE MISSING POUGHKEEPSIE COUPLE.

The Horse and Wagon in Which James Waters and Kitty MeLaughlin Drove Away on Oct. 26, Found in the River Near Hyde Park-Bodles Not Found.

POUGHKEEPSIE, Nov. 14 .- The relatives and friends of James Waters and his sweetheart, Miss Kitty McLaughlin, have come to the sad conclusion that their bodies are resting on the bottom of the Hudson River near Hyde Park. The party organized this morning to grapple for the bodies of the young couple brought to the surface. shortly after I o'clock to-day, the horse and wagon they took when they drove away on the afternoon of Sunday, Oct. 26. The horse was covered with mud. The harness was not broken, except the girths, which had parted with the swelling of the animal's body. Dr. C. P. Stanbrough, the owner of the rig, was present when the wagon was brought to the surface.

It was decided by Chief of Police McCabe, when it was discovered, that Miss McLaughlin had left a large sum of money in her dress suit case at her boarding house, that something had happened to her, or she would have sent to Mrs. Kessler, her landlady, and asked her to forward it to her. Up to that time it was thought that the couple had planned to elope and had left the valuable trotter and runabout hired from Dr. Stanbrough with some person who had been tempted to dispose of it Yesterday Chief McCabe went to New York and ascertained that E. G. Gilmore, a street car conductor, who said that he had seen Waters and Miss McLaughlin in New York on election day, was mistaken. On the same day Dr. Stanbrough identified as his property the blanket found in the river peace and welfare; neglect and disobedinear shore, about a mile north of Hyde Park, by towerman Joseph Terpenning several days after the disappearance of the young couple. This made it plain that in the river was the solution of the mystery.

Downes was arrested on Sept. 2, immediations of the superior officers and aiding and abetting in the keeping of a poolroom. young couple. This made it plain that in the river was the solution of the mystery. At 6 o'clock this moring Chief of Police McCabe, with Sergt. Sheedy, Roundsman Leroy and "Dick" Wood, a professional in river work of this character, went to Hyde river work of this character, went to Hyde Park, and with lines and grapples began the search for the bodies. The morning passed without result. There was a strong tide running and the work was very exhausting .

After dinner the men started in with re newed determination and the very first cast brought up a halter. The grapple was thrown out several times and came up covred with red paint. Finally it struck and held, and with a strong pull the wagon was brought to the surface. It was pulled up from a point fifty feet out in the river and seventy-five feet north of the freight house on the Hyde Park dock. The whip was on the Hyde Park dock. The whip was still in the socket.

The grappling party was disappointed that the bodies did not come up with the wagon. It was decided that they must be caught on a sunken spile or held by brush. Inquiry was made for dynamite and Supt. Wells of Fred W. Vanderbilt's place offered to supply it. Half a dozen sticks were discharged without apparent result, but it is expected that the bodies will come up during the night. The searchers returned to Poughkeepsie at dark.

To-morrow the shores near Hyde Park and the flats near Esopus island will be searched with the hope that the bodies will be found.

Waters was about 25 years of age. He was a member of several clubs and an officer of the Phornix Hose Company, the crack volunteer hose company of the city. Miss McLaughlin was 21, of petite city. Miss McLaughlin was 21, of petite figure and vivacious in manner. She dressed stylishly. When she was last seen she wore a black skirt, white waist, a light colored automobile coat and a picture hat, and several who noticed her driving up the Hyde Park road with waters remarked what a handsome couple they made. Waters was the youngest of several brothers who are prominent in the business world here and he was idolized by his aged mother, who is prostrated by the recent developments, and her life is despaired of.

Miss Melaughlin had planned to go to

Miss McLaughlin had planned to go Chicago to make her home with relatives there, and on the day she was last seen. Waters, who had been paying attention to her, walked down to her bearding house and asked her to go out 'riding. "I will give you a treat before you leave," he said. Miss McLaughlin laughingly accepted the invitation. Waters went to McCurdy's livery stable. All of the liveryman's teams were out, but Dr. Stanbrough offered teams were cut, but Dr. Stanbrough offered to let him have his pacer.

It was then 3 P. M. and Waters promised to return at 7 P. M. He drove to Miss McLaughlin's house and the two started up the Hyde Park road. They went to Staatsburgh, twelve miles north of here, and returned five miles to Francis Russell's roadhouse at Union Corners, where they remained until 7:30 P. M.

Then they started off in the direction of Hyde Park. One of the rubber tires on the wheels came off and was found in the road the next day.

As far as can be as certained nobody savem after they left the road house. It is them after they left the road house. It is believed that Waters drove west through Hyde Park village and took the road to the river, intending to stop at Frank Long's hotel near the railroad station. It is con-jectured that something startled the horse and that Waters was unable to swerve him e the junction of two roads, one of which eads to Long's, and that he continued lown the straight road through the Vanderbilt place, over the railroad crossing and under the freight house shed into the river. The distance from the railroad crossing to the edge of the dock is not over fifty feet. The dock is unprotected by a string piece and the gates at the railroad crossing were en. The locality is lonely and not fre-tented after dark. Probably when the orse plunged into the river Miss McLaughin threw her arms around Waters and the two died together. The developments of to-morrow are anytously awai'ed here.

GOOD WORK OF THE SUBMARINE BOAT ADDER.

She Makes a Mile Run Submerged, Turns Inder Water, Runs a Mile Back and Sends a Torpedo, Within Ten Feet of the Mark-Moccasin Runs Aground.

CUTCHOGUE, N. Y., Nov. 14.-No battleship that floats could have escaped the Whitehead torpedo launched from the new submarine torpedo boat Adder this morning in Peconic Bay, had it been lying at anchor in the place designated by the red and white flags 150 feet apart which represented the vitals of a battleship. The empty torpedo passed only ten feet or thereabouts outside the centre mark. The specifications for the trial stipulated that the torpedo should be discharged at the end of the two-mile submerged run, straightaway, during which not more than three observations of not to exceed one ainute each were pormissible.

Having met every requirement in regard to speed, and in fact having exceeded the requirements from a quarter of a knot submerged to a knot awash, the contracters voluntarily offered instead of making the comparatively easy two-mile run followed by the discharge of the torpedo, to make a mile run submerged, make a turn and return to the starting point, the firing of the torpe to take place there. The trial board recognized this as being a much more difficult test than that originally contemplated and accepted the proposition. To the surprise of those who witnessed the trial, in making the turn at the lower end of the course Capt. Cable made it under water, and did not take his first observation until the Adder was straightened out or tomeward course

Except for the fact that the Adder rose for observation and that it carried a hollow mast to which the periscope was attached, which left a slight ripple and wake, it would have been impossible for an observer, no matter how vigilant, stationed on the deck of a battleship at anchor where the target was, to pick up the submarine boat making the attack. The boat proved able to rise, take an observation and dive in scarcely more than half a minute, a fact hitherto the subject of considerable dispute. The awash runs of the Moccasin were run off this afternoon and the ten-knot run of the Moccasin awash and of the Adder on the surfaces were to have been run. The Moccasin completed its trial shortly before 4 o'clock, the time being quite satisfactory for the six runs, but a few moments later a dense fog settled down and the two submarines were fog-Union.

They Have Violated Them and Upper Classmen Propose to Punish the Violators.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 14.—The upper-class nen at Cornell declare that the freshmen are becoming too fresh and that they are violating certain rules which have been carefully prepared for their guidance. Accordingly a mass meeting was called to-day, at which steps were taken to compel the freshies o respect the regulations laid down by their superiors. The rules follow:

Rule 1. A freshman, in the contemplation of these rules, should be any student spending is first year at any collège or university. This applies to three-year as well as four-year

This applies to three-year as well as four-year courses.
Rule 2. No freshman shall smoke at all on the campus, nor shall be smoke a pipe on the streets of Ithaca.

RULES FOR CORNELL FRESHMEN | CARRIE NATION CRIES RAH RAH! Gives Harvard Yell and Denounces Cigarettes to the Boys.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 14.-Carrie Nation, the hatchet swinger of Kansas, held fort at Harvard this noon, and for a couple of hours she discounted everything else about the great university. Undergraduates missed lunch, if they were not so fortunate as to eat at Memorial Hall where Carrie made her first harangue against cigarettes and the saloon.

When some one tried to run off with her bonnet she said: "Remember the good Book says that man shall not wear the garments of women, nor women the garments of men.

At Sanders Theatre she told the boys how to save themselves and gave them some advice as to aiming high. Some one in the rear lighted a cigarette and in an instant she spied him. This led her on to the cigarette question and she said: "When cigarette question and she said: "When ever I see a man smoking a cigarette I know that he is making a criminal of himself. Oh, boys, you don't know the effect of cigarettes. They are eating the brains out of you. Oh, boys, I want to see you all in heaven. And you know that Carrie Nation has laid down her life for you; she has gone out into the world to fight the conspiracy that they have formed against young men."

young rien."
After her benediction she led three cheers for Harvard with her nickel-plated hatchet in her hand, and the undergraduates gave
